

Tommy Award Winner Analysis

Model Comparison and Results

Teddy Taussig

May 4, 2026

1 Overview

This document presents the results of several classification models trained to predict the recipient of the Tommy Heinsohn Hustle Award on a per-game basis. We compare regularized logistic regression (ridge, lasso, elastic net), a decision tree, a random forest, and XGBoost on the held-out 2024–25 and 2025–26 seasons.

2 Sample game data

Table 1 lists one Celtics game from the hustle table (2026-03-06, game ID 22500908 in the source notebook export). The Tommy winner column is the per-game label y (1 = Tommy recipient for that game). Net rtg. is the on/off proxy `plusMinusPoints`, shown as a whole number as in the notebook.

7 Notes

- The `siunitx` package aligns the decimal points so numeric columns look clean; adjust `table-format` in the preamble if a column needs more/fewer digits.
- To add a new model’s row, copy any existing row in Table 2 and replace the numbers (keep rows sorted by Top-3 accuracy, then lower log loss as a tie-break).
- To add a new figure, drop the image file into the same folder as this `.tex` file and copy a `\begin{figure}...\end{figure}` block.

8 Predicted Tommy wins per 60 minutes (full ranking)

Table 6 lists every player in the cross-team prediction export who logged at least 300 total minutes across `predictions/*_player_game_enriched.csv` (2024–25 and 2025–26), merged with predicted win totals from `predictions/*_predicted_tommy_counts_combined.csv`. The rate is $60 \times (\text{predicted wins})/(\text{total minutes})$. Rows are sorted by per-60 rate (highest first). To refresh the table body and the top-10 bar chart (Figure 4) after updating prediction CSVs, run `python3 build_results_per60_table_tex.py`. Unicode names in the fragment assume UTF-8 `pdflatex` or use `xelatex/lualatex` if compilation errors occur.

Table 6: Full league-wide ranking: predicted Tommy-style wins per 60 minutes (minimum 300 minutes).
